was only teasing.

Sister Ferne and brother Marx came out to visit our mom and dad. Mom fixed supper for them. They had fried mush, tomato gravy and eggs. Actually, I think that's what they had ordered. Our mom loves to cook.

In closing: Some people's minds are like concrete — all mixed up, and permanently set.

The recipe I am including this week was invented by our friend, Ken Hunter. Ken and his wife, Mona, came out to visit us and brought us a sample. It is very tasty!

Maple No Bakes

2 cups brown sugar

1 cup margarine

1 cup evaporated milk

2 tablespoon maple flavoring

½ cup chunky peanut butter

2 cup quicks oats

1½ cup flaked coconut

(use 3½ cups quick oats if coconut is not desired)

Boil sugar, margarine and milk for 1 minute and 15 seconds. Lower heat to simmer and add maple flavoring and stir in. Add peanut butter and stir until dissolved. Quickly add oats and coconut and stir it thoroughly. Drop onto greased cookie sheet in teaspoon size portions. Hurry! Yields about 6 dozen.
